ENCOURAGE WHITE

PLAQUE FIGHTERS.
 The national campaign quite often becomes of such absorbing interest that great occasions are passed with little note. The great world's congress against tuberculosis now at Washington has called there some of the most advanced scientists of the entire world, and their mission is almost superhuman. The white plague has respected neither race or zone, but has stealthily and steadily increased its ravages until it has threatened the humanity of some countries. The efforts of the scientists to ascertain a remedy rather than eliminate it worthy of the greatest approbation, and financial aid should be given those who seek to accomplish so much for humankind.

Among the physicians of the Mississippi valley states, the convention should receive their closest scrutiny, because it is the custom of that group, many of whom have never been 5,000 feet above sea level, to send their conclusions "to the mountains where it is high and dry." The patient has an advantage over his former sufferer; he seldom knows enough to stop and gradually ascend the mountains. Those who go straight to Phoenix or Leadville die the day of arrival.

This is not a jest; it is the cold hard truth, and whose wishes to make personal investigation will discover the statement conservative in a marked degree. But, after all, "is through" such men as gather at these great meetings and whose names seldom appear in print being easily embarrassed and also because their research is confined to some one great scientific topic in which the lady has but the smallest interest.

Still should one of these men accomplish the desired end, "it would be worth more to mankind than the preservation of a nation, and mark another epoch in the progress of man."

No newspaper can adequately relate the importance of this meeting; no ordinary newspaper maker or editor can furnish sufficient data for the reader to glean what all of us ought to know, but that each newspaper of the world should speak of and grant the wide publicity required can not only be done, but should be and in no unimpeachable manner.

Having beaten down and out the convict lease system in his state, Governor Holt Smith of Georgia, is to speak in seven Northern states. Governor Smith is one of the most convincing and best informed speakers of the United States.

Mr. Hearst went back to New York to get another batch of his employees' papers, and continue the effort to drive the column of trusts away from the Republican platform and the candidates named at the Chicago convention.

Mr. Bryan has achieved greater fame as an orator on his last speaking trip than ever before in his career. His speech in New York City, according to the World, far from his friend, was the greatest oratorical achievement known to American politics, and his matchless eloquence has improved it. There has been any change in the past few months.

MUCH IN LITTLE.

Some folks brag of their virtues until they make faults of them.

Count Tolstoi will never be accused of wanting popularity, or getting his beautiful.

Parade is made to make a speech on two that very will not like.

Bonaparte will be a low-down son-of-a-bitch, if he puts Congressman McKinley in jail before the election.

No use to start soup houses when the Republicans have a party. The victims would have no nickel to get soup with.

Next year's bathing suits will not be more abbreviated than this or the entire outfit will have to be referred to "generatively speaking."

Lots of people are advising the government with neither appointment or biscuits to look forward to.

The woodpecker trust declares it will defy the telephone pole concern and is keeping up the gait of former times.

Anyhow they have not threatened to remove Mack, while each Republican editor has told, in advance of course, why Hitecock has to flinger.

WHAT THE LEGISLATURE DID

Nowhere could be found a briefer and more truthful review of the important work of Oklahoma's first state legislature than is found in the democratic state platform adopted at Tulsa. The laws especially commended are enumerated as follows:

First: The creation of a banking board and the depositors guaranty fund, making a bank deposit in the state of Oklahoma as good as cash in hand, and thereby bringing into this state from other states, deposits equal to ten per centum of all the money owned by the people of our state.

Second: Making provision for the loan of school moneys of the state upon high class securities, and giving preference for the same to the farmers of our state.

Third: The enactment of a state printing board and state printing system by which the price of statutes of the state are reduced from $21 to $2.50, and the session laws from $3 and $5 to 50 cents each.

Fourth: The enactment of a separate coach law for the white and colored races.

Fifth: The enactment of a primary election law, by which the people choose their own candidates and through which candidates for the United States senate must pass the expression of the will of the people.

Sixth: The initiative and referendum act is the most complete and finished product of the kind ever written into law.

Seventh: The anti-lobbying law which prevents and punishes corruption by legislators, boards of county commissioners, city councils and school boards.

Eighth: To make ample provision for the punishment of public officers for accepting passes and other favors from railroads, telegraph, express and other companies in this state.

Ninth: The graduated land tax prevents land monopoly in the state.

Tenth: The graduated inheritance tax, placing proper burdens upon large estates.

Eleventh: The enactment of the gross receipts tax upon oil, gas, express, telegraph, telephone and other companies owning intangible property and incomes, requiring them to pay their just proportion of revenue.

Twelfth: For the enactment of the eight-hour a day provision for labor in the public service.

Thirteenth: For having provided for a full state government, the purchase of state supplies at one-half the cost of the state of Kansas for inferior service.

Fourteenth: For having enacted a complete system of agricultural and mechanical education for the children of the state. The same being the most thorough and complete of any state in the union.

We commend the legislature of Oklahoma for passing the separate school law which provides for separate schools for the white and negro races. We further endorse the provision permitting negroes to select their own school trustees, from their own race, for their own separate schools; at the same time the converse to be natural that the white race, which under our law includes the Indian race, are permitted to select their own trustee for their schools.

Who is best fitted to put into effect the reforms which the people of the United States are demanding in governmental affairs? The man who has advocated these reforms for the past twelve years, and has done more than any individual to bring the people to see the necessity of such reforms, or the man who didn't discover until after he was nominated for president that there were any reforms needed?

Bryan has been advocating the income tax for fifteen years. He has favored the direct election of United States senators for twelve years. He has preached publicity of campaign contributions in every state in the union for eight years. He has opposed Government by injunction and the unjust interference of the federal courts in labor disputes for twelve years.

Taft was nominated by a convention which refused by a vote of ten to one to adopt a plank favoring the direct election of United States senators, and Mr. Taft himself has not yet fully made up his mind on this question, but says in his letter of acceptance that he is "inclined to favor the idea."

The republican platform rejected a campaign contribution publicity plank by a vote of ten to one, but Mr. Taft says he thinks it might be all right to tell where they got the money—after the election. Mr. Bryan has directed his campaign manager to publish a full and complete list of all contributions and expenditures of the national committee at least ten days before the election.

Taft, while on the federal bench, rendered an opinion which gave him the nickname of "Injunction Bill," and this opinion is generally conceded to be the father of government by injunction in the United States. He reiterated the idea expressed in that opinion, on August 20, 1907, when he said in his speech at Oklahoma City, "but it is said that it denies to the workman, the man who is enjoined, the right of a trial by jury. It does not deny him anything of the sort; he never was entitled to the right of a trial by jury in an equity case."

BETRAYING OKLAHOMA

In their mail seal to defend the national republican platform and the republican candidate for president, the partisan republican newspapers of Oklahoma are traducing and vilifying the laws and government of Oklahoma state. An instance in point is an article in the Oklahoma State Capital opposing the bank deposit plank of the national democratic platform, in the course of which the following language is quoted from the Aurora, Illinois, Beacon:

"Oklahoma! Why shouldn't Bryan back to her? She gave him the deciding vote that swept him from a small newspaper job into a position of affluence. She provided him the opportunity to let loose his floods of oratory upon the eighty million people of the United States instead of a few hundred delegates at a national party convention. To-day she looks to him as the soul of her body, the fount of all her blessings, the man who provided the wind for her sails up the stream of paternal government."

"Mr. Bryan's bank guaranty ideas are suitable to business conditions in Oklahoma whose population is largely half-breed Indians and negroes."

What do the people of Oklahoma think of a political party whose newspapers and speakers have to resort to such villainous misrepresentations of the entire population of a state in order to bolster up their waning cause? How infinitely more execrable the newspaper of Oklahoma that would re-produce this vicious calumny.

Ninety-eight out of every hundred voters in Oklahoma believe in the bank deposit guaranty law. Its practical operation in Oklahoma for more than six months has demonstrated its feasibility, and yet the republican newspapers and Republican campaign managers are now attacking the law, declaring that it doesn't really afford protection to the depositors. The solution to this is easy. Joe Norris wants money for the National Republican committee to re-elect Bird McGuire to congress in the First District. The national Republican committee want some ingeniously contrived lies discrediting the bank deposit guaranty law. There's the solution in a nutshell.

POOR MEN LOOK TO BRYAN.
 John W. Hall, writing to the New York World, has the following to say as to his political views:

"Four years ago I voted for Roosevelt, but today Bryan is the man who stands for the rights of all the people. He has finally risen to the heights of the true and new Democracy and the champion of the old. The poor man has not had a friend in the white house since Lincoln died; today he looks to Bryan.

"Is many a day since Lincoln died but now today hope, angel eyed. Sit down beside the poor man's door; Today promises promise in the west. Springs like a flower from prairie sod; Emblem of truth on his broad breast, On the broad brow the sign of God."

VAGRANT VERSE.
 MATED.
 You have always been mine, dear, while waiting
 And yearning somehow I knew
 That the cry of my heart for the maiden,
 Would bring me at last to you.

I have watched the clouds in their drifting—
 They always went two by two,
 And I've seen 'em w the mountains were lifting
 Two summits towards heaven's own blue.

Even the waves locked crests with each other
 And I know full well that He
 Who had planned for each birding another
 Had not failed to make you for me.
